"A Sketch of the Howlands," communicated by L.M. Howland. In NEHGR, v. 34, April 1880, pp. 192-194. p. 194: George Howland of St. Dunstons in the East, London, Arthur Howland, John Howland, and Henry Howland. These three brothers in the order named were in 1646 to have [pounds] 8, 4, and 4 out of the debt due to the testator by Mr. Ruck of New England. This points conclusively to Arthur and Henry Howland of the Plymouth Colony, and proves that they had a brother John Howland, who can be no other than John Howland of the Mayflower.

"In 1635 when the Puritans were emigrating in great numbers from the old country to escape from the persecution of Archbishop Laud, under Charles I, George Allen (then an old man) and his family came to America and settled in Saugus." [source not given] "In 1637 George Allen joined with Edward Freeman and others in the purchase of the township of Sandwich and the same year settled in that place." [source not given] "He was a conscientious Puritan and a member of the Baptist Church." [source not given] "He was chosen Deputy, the first office in town, and served in that capacity for several years." [source not given] He died in Sandwich, May 2, 1648, aged about 80 years. In his will he named his five sons, Matthew, Henry, Samuel, George, and William. [This author presumes that Samuel Allen of Braintree, who married Margaret French Lamb, was George Allen's son] Crapo, H.H. Certain comeoverers. 1912. v. 1, pp. [181]-185: George Allen was the first of this family in this country. He was born, probably prior to 1583, in the County of Somerset, in England. he joined the party under the leadership of the Rev. Joseph Hull and sailed from Weymouth March 20, 1635, arriving in Boston May 6, and remaining there until July, when with other members of Mr. Hull's party he settled at Weymouth. In 1637 he moved to Sandwich and was a member of the first church in 1638. In 1639 he was elected Constable ... In 1640-'41-'42, he was Deputy to the General Court at Plymouth. In 1646 he built a house in Sandwich, about a quarter of a mile from the Quaker Meeting House on the main road to the Cape. It stood until 1882. Leonard, C.E. The Fulton-Hayden-Warner ancestry in America. 1923. p. 257: George 1 Allen, who was born 1658, at England, and died (bur.) May 2, 1648, at Sandwich, Mass. ... George Allen came from Bridgewater, County Somerset, England, in 1635. He was in Lynn, in 1636, and removed in 1637 to Sandwich, Mass., where he was representative to Plymouth in 1641 and 1642. His house built in 1646, was still standing a few years ago. ...

DeForest, L.E. Moore and allied families: ancestry of William Henry Moore. 1938. pp. 3-9. p. 3: George 1 Allen sailed from Weymouth, England, with a company of about twenty families and servants, largely from the parishes of Batcombe and Broadway in Somerset, under the leadership of the Reverend Joseph Hull. The ship sailed in march 1635, and his family was listed as follows: George Allin, aged twenty-four; Katherine, his wife, aged thirty; his son George, aged sixteen; his son William, aged eight; his son Matthew, aged six, and his servant Edward Poole, aged twenty-six. George Allen's age as given in printed sources is obviously incorrect. Banks suggests that Allen may have come from Saltford, Somerset. The Hull company arrived at Boston on May 6, 1635, and almost all of them settled at Wessagusset, later called Weymouth. On July 8, 1635, the General Court granted leave "to 21 ffamilyes to sitt downe at Wessagusset." George Allen was the head of one of these families, and he had land granted to him at Weymouth. His land was frequently mentioned in the Weymouth records and was described as "Three acres in Kingoke hill first granted to Robert Louell bounded on the north with the land of Hugh Roe on the south with the land of Richard Waling." He did not remain long at Weymouth, although his son George stayed there. It is said by the historians of Lynn, Massachusetts that George Allen was there in 1636, and this may well be so, as certainly it was ten men of Saugus, as Lynn was early called, to whom Plymouth Colony, on April 3, 1637, gave "liberty to view a place to sitt downe & haue sufficient lands for three score famylies." These

p. 4: Lynn men settled at Sandwich, in Plymouth Colony, where Allen is next found.

Hull and his followers had left England because of religious persecution there, but they brought with them the seeds of dissension, and Weymouth, their first place of settlement, was torn with religious discord. This may account for Allen's removal to Lynn, and from thence to the more liberal rule of Plymouth Colony. George Allen's sons early became Quakers, and were frequently fined and punished for their beliefs.

At Sandwich, Allen was one of the eleven first members of the church founded there in 1638. When, in 1644, it was necessary to repair the meeting house he was one of the contributors. His house there, which was built in 1646, was standing as late as 1882.

On March 5, 1638/39, before the Plymouth Colony Court, George Allen appeared in a list of "The names of such as are pposed to take vp their Freedom the next Court." On June 4, 1639, he was sworn in before the Colony Court as Constable for Sandwich, while on August 31st, the town records show "George Allen admitted freeman, & after also sworne constable of Sandwich for the remaynder of the yeare." This same record appears in the Court Orders of the Colony under date of September 3d. On March 3, 1639/40, and again on June 2, 1640, he was sworn in as Surveyor of Highways for Sandwich. On April 16, 1640, he was on the committee to divide the meadow land, and he received six and a half acres in this division. George Allen served as Representative from Sandwich to the Plymouth Colony General Court at the session of June 2, 1640; June 1, 1641; June 7, 1642, and August 20, 1644.

He served as juror on March 2, 1640/41. On June 1, 1641, the Plymouth Colony Records show that "Georg Allen, of Sandwich, became prey to the action that Edward Dotey pferrs. agst. Willm. Alney, of Sandwich," but nothing further is heard of him in connection with this suit. On March 1, 1641/42, he appeared before the Plymouth Colony Court to complain "agst. Edward Wollenston, gent., in an action of trespas vpon the case, to the dam. of iiijli. Two swine were attached, wch. are to remayne vnder attchmt. vntill the next Genall. Court." On August 20, 1644, "George Allen, of Sandwich, is lycensed to cutt hey at the pondes beyond Sandwich Playnes, so he giue not the Indians any thinge for yt. without approbacon of the Bench."

It has often been stated that it was George 2 Allen whose name appeared in 1643 in the list of those between sixteen and sixty who were able to bear arms in Plymouth Colony. This may be so, though there is no reason evident to the present writers to suppose it the son rather than the father. It may be that the basis for the statement that it was the son lies in the tradition that George 1 Allen was born in 1568, the son of Ralph Allen of Thurcaston, Leicestershire. There is apparently no proof of this parentage, and it seems more than unlikely that Allen was sixty-seven when he emigrated in 1635 with a young wife and young children.

On February 26, 1647, "Gorge" Allen was one of six men who were appointed to represent the town of Sandwich, and who agreed to repay to Edmund Freeman the seventeen pounds he had paid for the purchase of the town land and to whom Freeman, therefore, assigned the land.

George 1 Allen made his will, leaving twelve pence to all his children; five shillings and a calf to his son Matthew; "the ould cow" to his wife Katherine, together with his house and household stuff until she married again, when they were to be divided among his "five least children." These five were also to have a cow each. His son William was to have his meadow in the second division, and his sons Henry and Samuel the rest of his land. His "adventure in the barque" that is, his share in the ownership of a ship, was to go to his wife and five younger children. Presumably the eldest son, George, had already been given his share. The will was probated on June 7, 1648, and the inventory of the estate, amounting to forty-four pounds, sixteen shillings, was taken September 22, 1648.

He was buried at Sandwich on May 2, 1648. His widow, Katherine, married John Collins, Senior, of Boston, Massachusetts. The wording in the will is somewhat obscure, and the number of George Allen's children is not known. The following list is probably incomplete. It is quite possible that he had two wives.

- i. George 2, who was about sixteen in 1635.
- ii. William, who was about eight in 1635.
- p. 6: iii. Matthew, who was aged six in 1635.
- iv. Henry, who was born presumably after 1635 ...
- v. Samuel, who was mentioned in his father's will in 1648.
- vi. Gideon.
